Education Quality Work: The Hong Kong Experience

A handbook on good practices in assuring and improving teaching and learning quality
Education Quality Work: The Hong Kong Experience

A handbook on good practices in assuring and improving teaching and learning quality
Editorial Committee

Chairman: Professor T. P. Leung
Members: Professor Edmond Ko
Ms Pauline Mah
Professor Philip Moore
Professor John Spinks
Professor Joseph Sung
Dr Maureen Tam
Professor Danny Wong

Professional Secretary: Dr John Jones

This Handbook was published with funding support from the University Grants Committee of Hong Kong and the eight higher education institutions funded by the Committee.

This publication project was coordinated by Educational Development Centre The Hong Kong Polytechnic University Hunghom, Kowloon Hong Kong
Contents

Foreword ix
Preface x

PART 1 THE HONG KONG CONTEXT

Chapter 1 Recent developments in higher education in Hong Kong
1.1 Introduction 4
1.2 The University Grants Committee of Hong Kong 6
1.3 Selected initiatives in support of quality in teaching and learning 7
  1.3.1 Teaching Development Grants 7
  1.3.2 Teaching and Learning Quality Process Reviews 8
  1.3.3 The establishment of new universities and associated institutional cultures 8
  1.3.4 Standardised/mandatory teaching evaluation 9
  1.3.5 The role of educational development units and the use of educational technology 10
  1.3.6 Development of self-funded continuing and professional education 10
1.4 Recent developments: Some possible directions for the future 11

Chapter 2 The Teaching and Learning Quality Process Reviews in Hong Kong and a conceptual framework for good practices
2.1 The Teaching and Learning Quality Process Reviews in Hong Kong 16
2.2 A conceptual framework for good practices 17
  2.2.1 Teaching and learning as the primary functions of Hong Kong’s tertiary institutions 19
  2.2.2 Continued efforts to assure and enhance the quality of teaching and learning within the institution 20
  2.2.3 Teaching as a professional activity for academic staff 22
  2.2.4 Emphasis on graduates’ attainment of generic competences and desirable attitudes 23
PART 2  GOOD PRACTICES IN TAUGHT PROGRAMMES

Preamble: Some brief remarks on methodology

Chapter 3  Teaching and learning as the primary functions of Hong Kong's tertiary institutions

3.1  Promulgation of the view that teaching and learning are primary functions
  3.1.1  How is it decided what constitutes good/excellent teaching?
  3.1.2  Is good teaching conceptually distinct from excellent teaching?
  3.1.3  Examples of good practices

3.2  Issuance of rewards and resource allocations
  3.2.1  Rewards to units
  3.2.2  Rewards to individuals

3.3  Provision of teaching excellence awards
  3.3.1  Procedural issues to be addressed in relation to teaching excellence award schemes
  3.3.2  Examples of the system of teaching excellence awards

3.4  Internal allocation of teaching development grants
  3.4.1  Issues to be addressed in relation to allocation of teaching development grants

3.5  Strategic planning to continually monitor, assure and enhance the quality of teaching and learning
  3.5.1  Some principles regarding effective management infrastructures for quality in teaching and learning
  3.5.2  Examples of institutional infrastructure for quality assurance and improvement

3.6  Conclusion

Chapter 4  Continued efforts to assure and enhance the quality of teaching and learning

4.1  Systematic collection and analysis of feedback from stakeholders and use of that analysis
  4.1.1  Feedback from current students
  4.1.2  Feedback from graduating students
  4.1.3  Feedback from alumni
  4.1.4  Feedback from employers
  4.1.5  Feedback from external examiners

4.2  Benchmarking of practices and results by systematic comparison with those in other contexts, and the implementation of changes

4.3  Sharing of good practices
  4.3.1  Peer review and “critical friend” arrangements
  4.3.2  Arrangements for the dissemination and potential migration of good practices within and between units
4.4 Measurement and analysis of student learning outcomes and the use of that analysis

Chapter 5 Teaching as a professional activity for academic staff
5.1 Induction, training and support of staff with teaching responsibilities
5.1.1 Postgraduate students with teaching responsibilities/teaching assistants
5.1.2 Newly appointed/inexperienced academic staff
5.1.3 Academic staff at large
5.2 Creation of an adequately resourced unit responsible for development and enhancement activities in teaching and learning
5.2.1 Embededness of EDUs
5.2.2 Responsibilities devolved to EDUs
5.3 Establishment of institutional arrangements to ensure that research into teaching and learning is taken into account
5.3.1 Two institutional initiatives
5.3.2 Problem-based learning in two faculties
5.3.3 Some approaches that model environments for the promotion of desirable student learning outcomes
5.4 Constructive alignment of intended learning outcomes, teaching and learning arrangements, and methods for assessing learning outcomes

Chapter 6 Emphasis on graduates’ attainment of generic competences and desirable attitudes
6.1 Inclusion of mandatory components in curricula for developing students’ generic competences
6.2 Establishment and encouragement of extracurricular or co-curricular student activities

Chapter 7 Some brief concluding comments
7.1 Have the TLQPRs been useful and worthwhile?
7.2 Have the TLQPRs impacted on the quality of graduates?
7.3 How does Hong Kong compare internationally?
7.4 What does the future hold?

Appendix Exemplars of good practices in teaching and learning in research postgraduate education

Annex A Review methodology for the second-round TLQPR
Annex B Second-round TLQPR review template